

What does it mean to "Fuel the Find?"

Indexed records are like the fuel that gives FamilySearch.org the power to connect people to their missing family members. Every name you index adds another drop of precious fuel that can help someone else to find their ancestors and take their names to the temple!

Historical records document important moments in our ancestors' lives.

These records are often kept in archives around the world.

FamilySearch volunteers create digital photographs of millions of these records.

Volunteers index (transcribe) information from the images to make it searchable by computer.

These digital images are sent to FamilySearch for publication online.

Indexed information is like "fuel" that helps people search billions of names in seconds.

It has never been easier to find information about your ancestors.

Indexing also powers "hinting" — where the computer automatically displays records that match information about your ancestors.

...and take their names to the temple!

You can help Fuel the Find!
